Essay (5)

Q52. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Comprehension

Describe how feminism has contributed to the understanding of women offenders and women victims.

Suggested answer: Sample response: There are many ways in which feminism has contributed to the understanding of women offenders and women victims. Most importantly, feminism has helped us understand women and their relationships with crime. As a result, the research methods that were employed to evaluate crime have since evolved to incorporate feminist perspectives in the research environment. The newly evolved feminist research methods have helped provide a greater understanding of women's realities, lives, and issues.

Q53. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Application

Explain the relationship between victimization and offending. Give an example.

Suggested answer: Sample response: Research has consistently shown that a history of victimization in women is often a common factor for women offenders. The majority of the women in prison have experienced abuse, whether physical, psychological, or sexual. Unfortunately, this relationship turns into a cycle. The victim becomes the offender. Example, a young female who is being sexually abused by a family member runs away from home and turns to prostitution as means to support herself. Her interactions with the dangers of prostitution could lead to substance and drug abuse. Once in the criminal justice system, this young girl is tied to her criminal identity, which will hinder her ability to improve her situation, for example, education, inability to find employment, and so on.

Q54. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

Describe how the three waves of feminism differed from one another.

Suggested answer: Sample response: The first wave of feminism focused on women's suffrage and the right to vote. The second wave of feminism helped expand the focus to topics other than suffrage, such as reproductive rights, sexuality, and legal inequalities. The third wave of feminism addressed the different diverse perspectives of women including race, ethnicity, nationality, sexuality, and gender identity.

Q55. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Comprehension

Discuss the challenges faced by women working in criminal justice.

Suggested answer: Sample response: There are many challenges that women working in the criminal justice face, such as on-the-job sexual harassment, work–family balance, maternity, and motherhood. In addition, there are also challenges in how women manage their roles, duties, and responsibilities in a previously male dominated work environment.

Q56. [Essay] · Cognitive Domain: Analysis

Compare and contrast Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) and National Incident Based Reporting System (NIBRS). What are the advantages and disadvantages of each? How has NIBRS improved upon UCR?

Suggested answer: Sample response: The UCR and NIBRS are both data sources that help provide more information on crime rates. They are both longitudinal data sets. Some of the advantages of the UCR are that it is the largest data set in the United States. UCR includes demographic variables (including age, gender, race/ethnicity, location, and region) and allows researchers to compare changes over time. However, the UCR has its disadvantages. First, it only tracks arrest rates, thus any unreported crime is not calculated into the crime rates. Second, it only collects data on certain types of crimes (versus all forms of crime). Third, in the event that multiple crimes are committed in a single event, only the serious crime is taken into account (hierarchy rule). Fourth, participating agencies have fluctuated over time. Thus, the NIBRS, addresses some of the UCR's flaws, such as the hierarchy rule. The disadvantage of the NIBRS system is that that transition of agencies to the system has been slow; it is used in 58% of all police agencies in the Unites States.
