Short Answer

[QUESTION]

21. Explain the rules regarding overtime pay under the Canada Labour Code and briefly describe the 3 general exceptions to this rule.

Ans: Overtime must be paid at a rate of 1.5 times normal rate per hour of pay for any hours worked over 8 per day or 40 per week. Exceptions to this rule may be made if the employees are considered management or professionals, if the employer uses an averaging agreement (overtime would only apply to hours exceeding an average of 40 per week), or if there is a modified work schedule which is standard for the employment.

[QUESTION]

22. A Quebec employee who has completed 90 days of employment is asked to work on Canada Day in a manufacturing plant. Her normal rate of pay is $20 per hour. How much would this employee for each hour worked on Canada Day? Explain your answer and the calculation.

Ans: Employees who work on a statutory holiday are entitled to receive their normal rate of pay plus a premium of 1.5 times the rate for hours worked, if they have completed 30 days of employment prior to the holiday. In Quebec, Canada Day is a Statutory Holiday. This employee would be entitled to receive $50 per hour for work on Canada Day ($20 regular rate plus a premium of $30 per hour representing 1.5 times the normal rate).

[QUESTION]

23. What are the minimum contents of a statement of earnings under federal legislation?

Ans: Under federal legislation, at minimum, employees must be provided with a statement of earnings that outlines the period of time for which earnings are being paid, the number and type of hours (such as straight, overtime, holiday, etc), the rate of wage of each type of hours or the salary amount for the period, and the net pay. Statements must also include enough detail to allow the employee to identify the purpose and amounts of each payment.

[QUESTION]

24. Explain the differences between Federal and Ontario legislation regarding Pregnancy/Maternity Leave.

Ans: Under both employees are able to take up to 17 weeks of unpaid leave. Federal employees must have worked for 6 consecutive months and give 4 weeks notice prior to the due date or intended leave. Ontario employees only need to have worked 13 (not consecutive) weeks and give 2 weeks written notice prior to the date of leave. Federal employees must provide a certificate from a medical practitioner whereas Ontario employees only need provide one if requested by the employer. Federal legislation also restricts the timing of the leave to occur no earlier than 11 weeks before the due date and no later than 17 weeks after.

[QUESTION]

25. Do employment standard minimums restrict the ability of employers to offer competitive wages and benefits? Explain.

Ans: Employment standards minimums outline only the minimum required by law to protect employees. Employers are able to exceed these minimums in order to offer more attractive compensation packages if they choose. If employer policy is better than employment standards minimums, the policies will supersede the legislation.
