1. How might global issues require flexibility in human resource management to meet the diverse expectations of employees?

© 2020 Chicago Business Press. All Rights Reserved. May not be scanned, copied or duplicated, or posted to a publicly accessible website, in whole or in part.

HRM Core Concepts 1st edition Phillips Test Bank

ANSWER:

The workforce in the United States is already very diverse and is expected to become more diverse in time. Employee expectations and values differ around the world and HRM must modify its efforts to be effective in attracting, hiring, motivating, and retaining the best employees. People from different cultures have dissimilar traditions, are motivated by assorted things, and communicate in diverse ways. Motivating employees in a multinational organization can be very complex and requires much elasticity on the part of HRM. The effectiveness of HRM policy is influenced by the role expectations, norms, and traditions of a society. For example, if managers feel that large power differences are legitimate they may feel uncomfortable implementing policy promoting employee development.

ANSWER:

© 2020 Chicago Business Press. All Rights Reserved. May not be scanned, copied or duplicated, or posted to a publicly accessible website, in whole or in part.

HRM Core Concepts 1st edition Phillips Test Bank

Strategic risk: HRM initiatives can affect business strategy through the overall talent strategy, company culture, ethics, investments in people, and the implementation of change initiatives. Operational risk: HRM affects the speed and effectiveness of talent acquisition as well as the development of employees' skills and the identification and retention of top performers. These and other HRM activities can directly influence the organization's success or failure. Financial risk: HRM performance affects the organization's workforce costs and productivity directly through compensation, benefits, turnover, overtime, and time to hire, and indirectly through errors, accidents, delays, and lost production. Compliance risk: Every employment-related decision can have legal ramifications, particularly in the areas of diversity, health and safety, union relations, whistleblowers, and harassment. SEC regulations mandate the board of directors' responsibility for oversight of risk management policies. Boards must make known any material risks with the potential to affect company earnings. Because the acquisition, retention, and performance of talent have the potential to affect company earnings, it is essential that organizations identify and manage these risks through effective HRM.

ANSWER:

HRM professionals are not the organization's police. Their role, along with the HRM function, is to align the talent philosophy and HRM strategy with the business strategy and company values, develop supervisors' skills in managing and using HRM effectively, and serve as a resource for supervisors' questions and ongoing needs. Although focused on the "people" side of the business, HRM professionals are responsible for the effective running of the business and need appropriate business acumen. HR professionals must understand how their business makes money, and understand the company's economic and financial capabilities to make sound business decisions. The HRM department is also the warehouse of the firm's expertise in all areas of HRM, including employment law, staffing, compensation, benefits, teamwork, communication, performance management, and employee development. HRM professionals are also responsible for managing organizational change, including business expansion, restructuring, and downsizing. This requires good communication and influence skills as well as problem solving and leadership competencies.

5. Describe outsourcing and why it may be advantageous to some companies.

ANSWER:

Outsourcing is hiring an external vendor to do work rather than doing it internally. When another company or provider can perform a task or service better, cheaper, or more efficiently it can make sense to outsource work. Payroll processing, time and attendance records, and benefits management are some of the more frequently outsourced HRM tasks. A company can outsource one or many HRM tasks.

Outsourcing some HRM activities is particularly attractive to smaller companies. HR functions including payroll, benefits administration, and new-hire relocation require special knowledge, and full-time employees may not be worth the expense to smaller firms. Because they specialize in human resources, outsourcing companies often know how to get employees the best HR services, including health benefits and retirement plans. They may also be able to provide rewards programs to your company for less than you would pay on your own. Also, if your company needs any kind of HR support in issues like worker's compensation, outside vendors have this expertise and can also help you stay current on the most recent state and federal regulations to help your company stay compliant. It is critical to develop a strong relationship with external vendors to ensure they strongly support your organization's goals, strategies, culture, and philosophies.

7. Explain the concept of performance management.

ANSWER:

Performance management involves aligning individual employees' goals and behaviors with organizational goals and strategies, appraising and evaluating past and current behaviors and performance, and providing suggestions for improvement. Staffing influences the effectiveness of a performance management system by providing the raw talent that the system will manage. Even the best performance management system cannot replace important capabilities that employees must have to do their jobs well. Similarly, development programs are necessary to improve the skills identified in the performance management process. It doesn't do much good to let an employee know that she needs to improve her leadership skills if no opportunities for improving them are made available. Organizations also frequently tie compensation to performance management ratings. How would you feel if your bonus was determined by a supervisor's biased evaluation of skills and behaviors that weren't really related to your job performance? The authors know that this type of system wouldn't do much to motivate us!

Without performance goals, employees do not know what aspects of their jobs to focus on or the performance levels expected of them. As a result, they will tend to underperform, and some will quit or need to be replaced, potentially bogging down the staffing system. Without feedback, employees cannot adjust their behavior when necessary to reach their goals. Even if highly talented employees are hired, they can't perform at their best if they don't receive performance feedback or or if that feedback is inaccurate. If they perceive that the feedback they've been given is unfair, they will not be motivated to contribute as much as they could. Performance feedback is also important to maintaining ethical behavior and communicating organizational expectations.
